STC Foundation Community Council Honors Community STARS April 18 luncheon recognizes excellence and service

SAVANNAH – The Savannah Technical College Community Council will host the first annual Tribute to Community STARS (Savannah Tech’s Achievement Recognition) this spring, honoring some 30 individuals, nominated for their service and dedication at work or in the community. The luncheon event will be held on April 18 at noon in the college auditorium on the Savannah Campus, 5717 White Bluff Road. The event is open to the public. Tickets cost $50 per person – seating is limited.

“We know that there are very deserving people who are seldom formally recognized for their good work,” says Melinda Laager, executive director of the Savannah Technical College Foundation. “This event allows their organizations to publicly thank them for the value they add to our community.” Nominations will be accepted through March 18 space permitting.

Dr. Bertice Berry, best-selling author, comedienne and speaker, will deliver the keynote address. (Bio is attached) Celia Dunn Realty is the signature sponsor of the recognition event. The event to be held annually each spring, is sponsored by the STC Foundation Community Council, a group of young professionals charged with expanding the local knowledge and profile of Savannah Technical College and its mission and with raising funds to support the college, its programs and students. The Community Council is chaired by Tammie Hooks and Jamie McCurry and the recognition event is co-chaired by Lisa Colbert and Tammy Ray.

Proceeds from the event will fund adult literacy programs at Savannah Technical College and other special student-related projects.
